Reynolds Group Warehouse Lending Seminar Targets Best Practices and Fraud Prevention Education

One day seminar addresses lenders' concerns on marketing, credit, risk management, wires and custody

WHO: Reynolds Financial Services Group, L.L.C. has since 1993 provided advisory services to both leading and emerging mortgage bankers, lenders and investors who operate in the residential mortgage finance industry. Its services include broker to banker strategies; secondary marketing and risk management support; expert witness services; due diligence reviews on mortgage bankers operations and loan collateral for warehouse lenders and investors, including fraud/forensic audits; safety and soundness evaluations on warehouse lender operations.

The seminar will feature special guest Stanley Street, president of Atlanta-based Street Resource Group (SRG), who will co-present the seminar's Industry Overview session, offering insight to the need for business process automation that provides warehouse lenders with a competitive edge and enables mortgage lenders to manage their pipeline more effectively while increasing efficiency.

WHAT: The primary objective of Reynolds's Warehouse Lending Seminar is to assist the participants in recognizing warning signs ("red flags") that may help in the early detection of fraudulent activities being perpetrated by mortgage bankers and others.

The Seminar provides important information on policies and procedures currently utilized by leading warehouse lenders to minimize the risks associated with fraud in the mortgage banking industry. The Seminar also addresses key topics of concern, and examines effective loss mitigation strategies critical to managing a successful warehouse lending operation.
